COURSE DESCRIPTION: The purpose of this course is to develop competency across the breadth of film and video production with a focus on the art of filmmaking. Students will explore the three phases of production: pre-production, production, and post-production through writing, directing, producing, cinematography, lighting design, audio engineering, and editing. They will explore the history of film and video communication, the fundamentals of composition and movement, the aesthetic use of light, color, and sound, along with the art of storytelling and production design. Students will connect what they learn in this class and apply it to other subject areas, genres, art forms and careers. Students will learn how technology drives innovation in this art form and will discuss what changes the future may hold.

Students will develop visual literacy and the language of filmmaking, in addition to recognizing, analyzing, and applying proper shot composition. Students will be introduced to shot composition via lecture, video resources, and online references. Students will not only learn shot composition to create visual interest, but also the psychology of composition and how it affects the audience.

- Analysis of director’s choice of the following: shot, angle, movement, lighting, etc. and explain the director’s composition choices.
- Visual literacy vocabulary

Students will explore and demonstrate the aesthetics of light, color, and sound in film production. They will practice lighting effects on various foreground and background images to create various moods and visual appeal and demonstrate how shadows can be used to create dramatic effects and emotional responses. They will explore primary and secondary colors: warm, cool, and neutral colors, and color value, hue and intensity and demonstrate their effect in changing the mood of a scene. Further exploring light students will understand and demonstrate the concept of white light balancing and characteristics of reflected light along with traditional studio lighting such as triangle setup, key lighting, fill and back lighting.

Students will explore and demonstrate the importance of audio that reinforces the image by using various audio clips, both canned and original work, for creating specific emotional impacts. During post-production students will demonstrate creative editing and audio mixing for supporting and emphasizing a strong story line and for reinforcing the content message.

| Students learn that story must come first in all projects. The Monomyth (aka The Hero’s Journey) introduced by Joseph Campbell will be used as the foundation for discussing the traditional three act structure. Popular stories such as Star Wars, Harry Potter, The Hunger Games, etc. will be compared and contrasted on how they all follow the same hero’s journey. Students will both individually and collaboratively develop characters and short stories that follow the Monomyth in the form of quick writes, wikis, discussions, etc. Students will also analyze excerpts from classic (and modern) silent films to understand how to tell a story by only using the picture on screen, music and sounds. | 8 | 11 | Academic:

| While the focus in this unit moves students away from fiction, students learn that even in non-fiction the art of story crafting is important. The styles of documentary filmmaking are introduced and followed by several short essays by directors of documentaries discussing their approach, like Werner Herzog, Martin Scorsese, Morgan Spurlock, Ken Burns, etc., mostly taken from the book This Much is True. Students watch parts of these documentaries, and at least one in its entirety. They then compare and contrast style, approach, and effectiveness of constructing a story through the documentary format in class discussions and brief writings. | 12 | 20 | Academic:

Students look at one practical aspect of making videos through the form of advertising and commercials. Students learn about how advertisers appeal to our logos, pathos, or ethos through selected readings, lectures, and videos, mostly from the web. Following this, they then find a TV commercial representing each, and write a Blog post analyzing and explaining how each commercial uses that particular form of persuasion.

- Script writing program, or event. As part of pre-production students will also discuss which of the three methods of persuasion they are focusing on and explain why that method will be most effective.
- The commercial is evaluated not only on the quality of the final product, but how it reflects the method of persuasion chosen.
